Mr. Henderson, Inspector of Public Buildings, for the Territories, arrived in town on Sunday. He left on Monday to Inquiry.

The question of the horses recently lost from Oxfart's band, is being enquired into. Some evidence has been taken, but in the interests of justice we withhold its publication.

A public meeting will be held this evening in the Methodist church, at 8 o'clock, to hear the report of the committee appointed to arrange matters in regard to a

An illicit still was discovered last Friday near Shaganappi Point, with evidences of having been lately used. Doubtless this was where the bad whiskey, which has painted so many noses lately, came from. No arrests.

The Saskatchewan Coal Company have appointed Mr. Frank Dick, agent. Mr. Dick expected two carloads in on Monday, but a telegram from Mr. Lawton, the man-

On Mr. Egan's arrival last week, he met Mr. Fitzgerald, the secretary of the agricultural society, and after viewing the samples of products on hand, promised a car for transport to the Dominion and Provin-

Messrs. Rogers & Grant have again found it necessary to extend their premises by the addition of another store-room 12 x 26 feet.

Messrs. Davidson & Son are moving into their new store. It is a commodious building, and is so arranged as to display to great advantage their large and fine stock of jewellery.

Archbishop Tache.
This eminent Catholic Divine is expected here to-day. He will visit the Mounts, and Father LaCombe hopes to induce him to remain in the diocese. Sunday if Father LaCombe is successful the members of the Catholic Church will listen to a highly cultured, liberal minded, and eminently pious divine. Some thirty years ago His Grace visited the McKenzie River and from there went nearly to the Arctic Ocean, this feat, which entailed a great amount of hard-ship, was done in the interests of his Church.

Hands off. Recent arrivals from the Columbia inform us that Gold Commissioner Vowe has recently returned from Victoria with news concerning the action posted a short time ago by the Dominican authorities, laying claim to all the minerals for twenty miles on each side of the P.R. line. He assures the miners that the B. C. Government do not propose to reliquish their claim to the minerals aforesaid and will protect miners and prospectors the claims they have staked out. This likely to furnish another case for the Privy Council.

hundred and twenty graduates, looking, well-to-do bachelors who would gladly welcome the right kind of women to their hearts and homes. If this large number of unmarried ladies in Bowmanville arises through the lack of material to work upon, we advise them not to wait for leap year, but to at once take Horace Greely's advice to young men and—"Go West."

Love and Logic.

Love and logic can't agree;
Love is not philosophy.
But a burning
Sensory turning
Logic into misty valley.
Love is longer,
Love is stronger
Than the iron rule of three.
Love is not a bee that stings
Honey from a thousand lips;
For saying,
Love is stronger
Where the rarest nectar drips.
Love is fiercer,
Love is kinder,
And a purer love drips.
Love's a wayward dream that hides
In the heart and there abides,
Lightly sleeping,
Only waking,
Till the tender heart awakes.
Never harming,
Love's more charming
Than all else on earth looks like.

They May Expect Sympathy There.

Beyond all question the Greely party suffered greatly for the necessities of life, and may have been forced to the dreadful extremity of eating each other. But are they the only sufferers? Look at the thousands of people who live in boarding-houses.

Midnight Notes.

Persons who have watched much with sick people at night, or who have been often awake at midnight from any cause, have noticed an unusual number of noises at that time. Those who are not cowardly often ascribe these to the blinds or the cat or a starting nail. But just now, in Nevada, an old lady Hill minor, who has had fifteen years' experience underground, says that she has observed one peculiar fact, that between twelve and two o'clock in the night, if there is a loose stone or bit of earth in the mine, it is sure to fall. Says she: "About this time it seems that everything begins to stir; and just after twelve, although the mine has been still as a tomb before, you will hear particles of earth and rock come tumbling down, and if there is a caving piece of ground in the mine it is sure to give way."

A man entered a photographer's studio. The artist placed him in position and screwed up his machine to the proper focus. "Now look bright and cheerful," he said, "and keep your eye fastened on that hole in the wall." Instead of looking bright and cheerful the man looked at the hole in the wall, and then, with a look of infinite weariness, he said: "What's the matter with you, explained the photographer. 'Brace up, I say, and look pleasant.' " "It's the position costs anything extra," was the answer. "I am willing to pay for it. My wife is up in the country visiting friends, and this picture goes to her. I know what I am about. Pull the blanket off, Mr. Artist, and begin counting."

At a Daily Show.

A reporter in the States attended a baby show and inspected a pair of twins. "Very pretty, indeed," he said with sweet earnestness. "Which is the oldest?"

"Neither," said the mother, looking surprised and somewhat angry. "I observe," the reporter continued, pointing at one of the cherubs with his pencil, that this little one does not look well. I trust, my good woman, he has enough to eat."

"He is a girl, sir," replied the mother with intense dignity, "and her diet is properly attended to sir."

"Yes, of course," continued the reporter, looking more critically at the child. "I was aware of that. Now don't you think that the paleness of the little thing is unnatural?"

"I would not insinuate that it has not enough to eat, but if the food is the right kind. Now I know that nothing builds up the system more rapidly than roast beef. The child ought to have a liberal supply of fresh beef at once. No teeth, I observe, too; that's very bad indeed. I suppose the baby's child has been brought here as a curiosity. And it has no hair worth mentioning. Poor thing!"

Then he turned to mother and remarked consolingly: "Let us be thankful, my poor woman, for the progress of science and the arts. The unfortunate child can be provided with teeth by the dentist, and there are hair restoratives. We may assume, at least that it has a soul, and we know that not a sparrow is pertioned. Even the hairs of our head are numbered, and you may rest assured that this small representative of fallen humanity was sent hither for some good purpose. It is awful, my poor woman—take a way."

And the mother said the twins distractedly and fled from the show.

The Cowboy's Mother.

"When I struck Philadelphia," said Broncho Bill, one of the best known cowboys travelling with the Wild West Show, "I wanted to see my mother. I knew she was living, but I was blamed if I could catch the exact spot, and it kind of stumped me. Didn't know what I had. One day a preacher fellow that I had known at Pine Ridge Agency, Nebraska, came up to me when the afternoon show was over. He had come east on a visit. I told him 'bout not being able to locate my mother, and he said he'd fix it all right. 'So away he goes an' finds some sort of a big oak—I think it was a register. Anyhow it had my mother's name in it, and the number of her house. You bet I was glad. I told the boys, and they fixed up right away—going to see all fair, you know—that's the boys every time. We took a car and rode down into the city to Twelfth street. I think they called it. I left the boys there and asked a feller the way to Catherine street. 'Fifteenth block,' he says. 'Phew,' says I. 'All right, though; I guess I can do it,' and off I walked through the streets, an' the people an' the horses and carriages till I came to Catherine street."

Well, I found the house and knocked at it, and my mother opened the door. I hadn't seen her for twenty years—not since I went west. She was sweeping out and had the broom in her hand, an' she started when she seen my cowboy dress, an' looked hard at me. I had made up my mind to play stranger and tell her I was a friend of her son. See I, 'Are you Mrs. Irving?'

"I am," she says, 'kinder chokin' like,' an' looks at me harder'n before."

"See I, 'Well, I'm from Pine Ridge Agency, Nebraska, and I know your son Bill. He told me for to call on you son Bill. I never had one."

"Oh so, my son," says I, 'you're mistaken an' am.' " "With that she began to cry and melt down. What—well, that broke me up, and I began cryin' too. 'Yes, mother, I am your son,' I said. 'See I, Bill!' She cried harder than ever then, and—oh, never mind just what happened. We had so much to tell each other that I was late getting to the show."

"Next day I brought my wife to see mother same as I'd promised. My brothers and sisters were in and waitin' for me, and didn't we have the fun! Just time. So glad to see me they did, know what to do. Mother got a crying fit, an' then my sisters took it up, then my brothers chipped in, and I was bawled if I wasn't howling away as bad as any of em before long. My old woman, too, was cryin' for all she was worth. That made me mad. 'What are you crying about?' says I. 'I don't know,' 'Well, I'd shut up, then,' says I. But there was nary a shut to her."

Raising Market Chickens.

Landlady—"I have a new market man and I think he will do better than the last one. He says his chickens are all raised on the refuse of a cheese factory."

House-keeper—"That does not sound very tempting."

L.—Well, no, it does not sound so, and yet we all know that such food ought to be good for chickens."

L.—At any rate the new man cannot be overthrown on an improvement on the old one."

L.—You think so, then."

L.—Oh yes; his chickens were evidently raised on the refuse of a rubber factory."

Tastes Differ.

An Austin candidate was very demonstrative towards the coloured voters during the excitement of a local election. In a speech of political innuendo he went up to an influential darkey who kept a saloon, and said: "I would rather ten times over grasp the hand of an honest coloured man than that of a white leader."

"That's what we differ. I'll take de hand of de white leader terry every time. Shake 'em," Texas Sittin'.

Making a Human Face.

In 1871, Thomas Colt, then twelve years old, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, New York, suffering from a disease which had destroyed his nose and lips and had begun to affect his eyes. He was taken in charge by Dr. Gustavus Sabine, and since that time has been under treatment with a view to replacing the lost parts of the face.

After the course of the disease had been checked the process of building up was begun by cutting away the flesh about the edges of the orifice where the nose had been. Then the inside of the large finger of the right hand was flayed, and the fresh-cut wound was fitted where the nose should be. The hand was held in place by bandages and plaster of Paris until the finger had grown fast to the forehead and cheeks of the patient. In the meantime the mouth was covered by the hand, and a silver tube was inserted into the left throat, through which he was fed and through which he also breathed.

When the grafting of the finger to the face was completed and circulation established, the finger was amputated near the knuckle, leaving two and a half joints attached to the face. The operations so far had occupied about a year, but the process was only begun. The next step was to trim down the finger into the shape of a nose by removing the bone and gradually building up the flesh on each side, and drawing the skin from the cheeks and forehead over it. In course of time the result sought was obtained, except that there were yet no nostrils.

The eyes of the unfortunate boy had both been drawn out of position somewhat, and these were straightened by clipping nerves in the manner usually adopted by oculists in treating cross-eyed people. The eyebrows were also patched up at the inner ends.

The next step was to give the boy a new pair of lips. This was done gradually by taking pieces of flesh from the cheeks and grafting them in place bit by bit.

Yesterday, after thirteen years of experience under a surgeon's knife, having meantime undergone and recovered from thirty different operations, the patient, now a young man, came to the hospital and showed no trace of what he had passed through. The case is extraordinary for the extent of the work done and the perfect result obtained. Not less extraordinary was the forbearance of the patient, who never murmured under the necessarily painful process.

Wanted a Note.

Mrs. Simdlet—"I am going to buy some nice notions to decorate our house. Have you seen any that you admire?"

Old Boarder—Oh yes, quite a number."

Mrs. S.—I am so glad, because you can now give me some suggestions. Of course I have a "Bless Our Home" for the front hall, and I also have some appropriate ones for the parlour. It is the dining room that bothers me."

O. B.—I saw one to-day that would be just the thing."

Mrs. S.—Indeed, where was it?"

O. B.—In a grocery store."

Mrs. S.—That is a queer place. What did it say?"

O. B.—It said, "If you don't see what you want, ask for it."

Mr. Bright, who is apt in command of quotations from well-known English authors, excelled in expressing the attitude of the House of Lords in rejecting the Franchise Bill they "closed so well." He applied to their action the quotation from Robt. the Grinder in "Dumley and Son," "Can't you be fond of a cow without a squealing him and a-throttling him?"

It is an old saying that you should drink wine when you go to Paris, the water is seldom fit to drink. But how good is the wine? In the last report of the municipal laboratory, under whose scrutiny the wines of the city trade must pass, the number of good samples found among 3,361 was only 357, while 1,933 were passable, 1,700 were bad, and 202 positively dangerous.

Here is a quaint bit of real life: An old and blind fiddler was arrested in New York for disorderly conduct and was taken to the police station. The officer's outburst into the fiddler's arms, and he uttered an uncompromising remark about "fiddler's change." The blind man heard the remark, apologized to the court and had his fine remitted for his politeness.

Profits in the Stock Business.

The profits and wealth of the cattle business may be realized in figuring up the value of the Texas drive of this year, estimated at from $200,000 to $750,000 head. At the smallest estimate—$40 per head—there are $200,000 as the income of the Texas stock owners for one branch of their business only. Farmers need very much to realize this fact, which has more than would force when the wheat crop now harvesting promises more than $500,000,000 bushels, and seventy-five cents a bushel seems a possible price. The most money made on farms henceforth, will be made by the stock farmers.—Rural New Yorker.

Northwest Interests.

Dr. D. McEchran, the well known veterinary surgeon, and government quarantine inspector, after absence of four months in the Northwest, during which time he was engaged in looking after the large cattle interests of the country, arrived in the city yesterday noon. Dr. McEchran spoke authoritatively of the condition of the crops throughout the Northwest, and having had exceptional opportunities for observation his opinion on that subject is entitled to great weight. He stated that when he passed eastward from Calgary last week about one-half the crop had been sold, and the balance was being rapidly reaped. The late cyclone, which occurred before he reached Winnipeg, was seriously local in character, and caused no serious or widespread damage. The crops from Calgary estimated by Dr. McEchran described in glowing terms, referring especially to that of Mr. John Clark at Crowfoot Creek, who had as fine fields of wheat and barley as could be found in the country over. Referring to the cattle interests, Dr. McE. said it was in a most promising condition. The mortality in all the ranches is low, except among a few cattle brought in late in the season. The grass and hay are still green, and so not that stocking cows are as late enough for beef. As an example of this Messrs. Baker & Co. are killing steers which dress from 900 to 1,000 pound of beef, the cattle being obtained from the Cheyenne ranches. Now that ranchmen have become alive to the necessity of keeping large stocks of hay, giving more care to stock and providing better shelter in winter the doctor is of opinion that the mortality will greatly decrease next year. He said that the industry, properly fostered, will yet become one of the most important interests in Canada.

Canada and Africa.

For the second time in history England has drawn upon her great American dependency for military aid beyond the seas. The regiment known before the territorial assignment of British corps as the 100th, or Prince of Wales' Own Foot Canadian, was raised in Canada, and recruited from residents of the Provinces. And now we are informed by telegram that the English Government has called upon the Canadians to supply a body of men, three hundred strong, accustomed to the life of the trackless regions where they gather the pelts that adorn the fair of other chieftains. It is a singular request to have made.

The men are going, there being apparently no difficulty in finding volunteers among a class accustomed to adventure and inclined to hardship. But would it not have been wiser to draw them from India, where climates similar to that which will have to be endured are easy to find, and which would supply men upon whom the desert heat of Egypt would have little if any effect?
